Fair Trade Art from Africa, Handmade from Recycled & Sustainable Materials

Our Story

Introduction

Zimba-Arts specialize in fair trade art from Africa, handmade from recycled and sustainable materials. The company was founded by Shadreck Huni, a Dutchman with Zimbabwean roots, who began making and selling traditional art from Zimbabwe to finance his studies in the Netherlands.

Zimba-Arts has headquarters in a historical, converted farmhouse in the Netherlands countryside and a dedicated workshop among a community of artists in Harare, Zimbabwe. Shadreck spends his year traveling back and forth between Europe and Africa, designing new art and mentoring his artists.

His art gained popularity in European art markets, festivals and trade shows; and so he made the decision to join the World Fair Trade Organization by importing and distributing the handmade artwork created by his old schoolmates in Zimbabwe, where over 72% of the population is living in poverty and also took it upon himself to help other young people and women groups in Kenya, Rwanda and Uganda. This is the seed that has grown into Zimba-Arts, a company that now supplies over 600 retailers in Europe.

The proceeds from the sale of this artwork continue to help sustain the livelihood of artisans and their families. As Founder and CEO, Shadreck works with groups of artists in the high-density suburbs of Harare, Zimbabwe's capital city, offering mentorship, he helps them to master their skills and make their art accessible beyond the African market. In 2014, Zimba-Arts expanded its mentorship programme to include artists in Ongata Rongai Kenya, Kigali Rwanda and Kampala Uganda.

Shadreck believes in the creativity, talent and potential of each of these young artists. Through his mentorship, Shadreck offers advice on how to make impeccable artwork that is competitive on the European market.

As he mentors them on the importance of prioritizing business management and proper financial planning, he also instills in his artists the importance of education attainment; so as they receive increased income from the selling of their artwork, a percentage is set aside to pay for their children's school fees. Shadreck truly believes that youths are the future of Africa, and that the achievement of their academic and career goals will help make a better society.

Did you know?

Most developing countries have no official recycling system, but many have a strong informal recycling sector. Individuals retrieve reusable materials from local landfills and resell them; a job that benefits the environment while providing a source of income for those who need it most. It is estimated that over 15 million people in developing countries survive by salvaging recyclables from the urban population's waste stream. Zimba-Arts supports this informal recycling sector, where materials from African landfills are reborn as art.

Recycled Metal and Wire Art from Zimbabwe

Each Zimbabwean sculpture is made from scrap metal – oil drums, cars, washing machines, refrigerators and stoves – salvaged from the landfills in Harare. The metal is put into a fire to remove paint and rust, cut to specification and welded to create the sculptures that Shadreck designs. The art is then varnished, painted, varnished again and finally left to dry under the African sun. The finished pieces are sent from Zimbabwe to the Netherlands, introduced onto the European market – and are brought into your home.

Sustainable wooden Art and Sisal baskets from Kenya and Rwanda

Our wooden artwork is made from the fast growing Jacaranda tree, a multi-purpose wood that is obtained sustainably from nearby Machakos and Kiambu Counties. Use of this relatively soft "good wood" helps to prevent forest degradation, reduces pressure on endangered hardwood species, secures future wood supplies for the carving industry and therefore continues to support the livelihood of Kenya's wood carving artists.

Our Story

Sustainable Sisal from Rwanda.

Rwanda is a land of hope, pride and superior artisans. After the devastating genocide in 1994, 70% of the Rwandan population was women, many of them widows with children. Today these women are providing for their families through sales of their beautiful, traditional, hand crafted treasures.

Recycled bottles.

In Kenya we have been collecting old wine and champagne bottles to make flower vases for nice home decorations. We are working with groups of women that are very creative. They use wool to decorate the bottles for making the perfect and well designed vases that make their way into your homes.

Cleaning our environment by recycling turns things into other things and our art is magic. We believe the impact of recycling is huge and diversified, if we focus on it we can make something beautiful out of it, for this generation and other generations to come.
